

Marketing your Strengths

The most critical aspect of the job interview is marketing your strengths to your prospective employer. You need to confidently and clearly present your strengths. Be sure to include good supporting evidence to demonstrate that you can meet the company's needs. In this way, you are marketing your competency in a context that interviewers are very familiar with. This is a very effective strategy for job interviews.